Ongoing costs of investment funds

Investment funds have ongoing costs, which are not charged to investors, but are charged directly to the capital assets of the investment fund and thus charged to the investment fund's return. These costs amount to up to 1.3% p.a. The ongoing costs of investment funds include in particular the management fee, custodian bank fee, the costs for transactions within the fund and all other costs that may be charged to the investment fund's assets in accordance with the fund contract.

Currency exchange fees

For foreign exchange transactions (FX), the custodian bank charges a surcharge to the current market price. This surcharge is levied on asset management transactions that require currency conversion. The maximum surcharge per spot transaction in relation to the target currency (Swiss francs) is 0.70%. The amount actually debited depends on the transaction volume.

Third-party fees

External charges include, but are not limited to, market access services, platform fees, brokerage fees paid to external brokers, etc. These fees are not covered by the flat fee and are charged to the client.

Stamp duty

The Swiss stamp duty can initially be between 0.0% – 0.15% and is levied on transactions that are settled via a Swiss bank or another Swiss securities dealer. Other local transaction taxes may apply when trading foreign financial instruments.
