

Understanding your pension certificate

This information sheet shows you how your pension certificate is structured. It provides explanations and contains useful information on key topics.

The numbered paragraphs refer to the respective sections in the sample pension certificate. Please note that the sample pension certificate covers all pension solutions of the collective foundations managed by Swiss Life. If you have any specific questions on your pension solution, please refer to the relevant provisions in the pension fund regulations.

1 General information

This contains information on your contract and your personal data. The reported annual salary typically corresponds to the AHV annual salary reported by your employer and should amount to your actual annual salary (gross salary according to annual salary statement).

The insured salary equals the annual salary minus the coordination offset. The purpose of the coordination offset is to harmonise the pensionable income and the first pillar (Federal Old Age and Survivors' Insurance, AHV).

2 Retirement savings

Your accumulated retirement savings are calculated to the day and correspond to the date of issue of your certificate. They include the annual savings contributions, any vested benefits transferred and interest, as well as purchases and any other allocations (e.g. bonuses).

If you terminate your employment relationship, you are entitled to the vested benefits. The vested benefit is transferred to the employee benefits institution of your new employer. Should you not take on new employment, see the "Departure" information sheet under the link on your pension certificate (see no. 11) for what can be done.

Your pension assets earn interest at the rates shown in your pension certificate. The interest rates for mandatory benefits coverage are set annually by the Federal Council; the interest rate for supplementary cover is set by the Board of Trustees or by the Administrative Board, depending on the pension solution.

3 Retirement benefits

In principle you can choose from among a lifelong annuity, a one-off lump-sum payment or a mixture of the two.

You see the projected lump-sum benefit or the projected annuity at the time of normal and early retirement. We have calculated the projected lump-sum benefit using the data known at this time (available retirement savings, insured salary, annual retirement credits and insurance term until retirement). The interest rate used in the projection is based on the effective interest rate on the pension assets in recent years and is also stated on the pension certificate. The capital is the basis for calculating the retirement pension.

The amount of the pension depends on the conversion rate. The pension is calculated by multiplying the retirement capital by the conversion rate. In the event of early retirement, the conversion rate and thus the pension are reduced accordingly. The retirement pension upon retirement is payable for life.

In addition to the retirement pension, retired person's children's benefits are paid out if they are provided for in the pension plan. Following retirement, you receive children's benefits for each child under the age of 18 (or 25 if the child is still in education). There is also provision for survivors' benefits for spouses/life partners and children.

4 Financing early retirement

Please note that this information only appears when your other purchasing potential has already been fully utilised (see point 7). The maximum possible purchase sums are shown here should you opt for early retirement. By paying this amount you can ensure that you receive a full pension even in the case of early retirement.

5 Disability benefits

You receive the full annual disability income if you are at least 70% disabled as defined by the Federal Disability Insurance (IV) and the waiting period has expired.

If you are partially disabled, you receive disability benefits corresponding to the degree of disability in accordance with the pension fund regulations. Benefits are paid out from a 25% degree of disability.

A disabled person's children's benefit is payable for each child under the age of 18 (or 25 if the child is still in education), if your pension plan so provides.

The waiver of contributions means that you and your employer no longer need to pay any contributions if you are disabled and the waiting period has expired. Your retirement, survivors' and disability benefits remain insured to the same amount.

6 Benefits in event of death prior to retirement

Life partners and same-sex partners enjoy the same conditions upon the death of the insured person as obtain for married and registered partners, provided that the marriage-like relationship existed in the same household for at least the last five years before the insured person's death or children from the relationship must be supported. This is subject to the provisions of the pension fund regulations that are valid at the time of death.

Your spouse or life partner may request payment of a whole or partial lump sum instead of a spouse's or unmarried partner's pension.

Each entitled child receives an orphan's benefit at least until the age of 18 (or the age of 25 if the child is still in education), if your pension plan so provides.

7 Purchases and redemptions

Most insured persons could potentially purchase benefits in the second pillar. As a result you receive higher or even the maximum insurance benefits.

Note that by law purchases can only take place once prepayment for home ownership has been reimbursed.

For additional useful information concerning purchases and redemptions, as well as the legal conditions, see the information sheet "Purchases" at the link on your pension certificate (see point 11).

8 Funding

You and your employer finance the insured benefits. Your employer deducts your monthly contribution from your gross salary. The employer pays the difference to make up the total.

The savings contribution (premium component that finances the retirement benefits) has a direct effect on the retirement savings. The insured disability and death benefits are financed through risk contributions.

9 General information

The maximum possible prepayment for home ownership is equal to the relevant vested benefit entitlement until the age of 50. After the age of 50, either half of the current vested benefit entitlement or the vested benefit entitlement at the age of 50 can be withdrawn, whichever is higher.

10 Administrative Board

The members of the Administrative Board are charged in particular with implementing the pension fund regulations, with informing insured persons and with electing the members of the Board of Trustees.
